

BUFFALO RIVER GUIDE no. 4

AN AMATEUR'S REVIEW OF OUTDOOR TOPICS
FOR THE 2005

T254 OZARK CANOE EXPEDITION
TO THE
BUFFALO NATIONAL RIVER

WHERE IN THE WORLD IS THE

BUFFALO NATIONAL RIVER?

This new (free) map site (Google Maps) from those incredible supergeeks at Google will orient you quickly to the pre-river portion of the T254 Ozark Canoe Expedition to Buffalo National River.

Go to: <http://maps.google.com>

On top of the GoogleMaps page, select Directions

Enter this: 2200 Briarwood Way Birmingham, AL into Start address box.

Enter this: St. Joe, AR into End address box

Hit the Search button

Explore !

 Note that we will cross the largest river of the northern hemisphere, the mighty Mississippi [The Ojibway Indians of northern Minnesota called it "Messipi" or "Big River," and it was also known as the "Mee-zee-see-bee" or the "Father of Waters." European explorers who mapped all the river's channels and backwater areas called it a "gathering of waters." Native Americans of different tribes who originally lived near the Mississippi and used it for canoe transportation, hunting, and fishing, often viewed the great river as the center of the universe.].

